

Quote from beneficiary

“The standard of work the offenders have completed is tremendous. We couldn’t have afforded it ourselves. The social club is a community facility, so it’s not just us that benefit from this and the job the Community Payback team has done is a real credit to them.”

Vice-chairman of local football club

“The work group were well managed, well mannered – and they got the job done. We need our canal boat looking bright and shiny, and after they spent a day cleaning and polishing it looked great. We would certainly encourage other local groups to invite the Community Payback team to help them out too – we’re very grateful to them and glad we asked.”

Beneficiary from a canal boat trust

What difference does it make?

Community Payback is positive and cost effective. It gives offenders a chance to repay local communities for their crimes by doing work that benefits the area. It does not replace paid employment. It complements work done by local authorities and voluntary organisations.

What is Community Payback?

Community Payback is a punishment which requires offenders sentenced to Unpaid Work to repay the community for their crimes. They have to carry out demanding work as a sentence from the courts for up to 300 hours.

If they are in full-time work or education they must give up one day at weekends to do Community Payback. Unemployed offenders may have to work for three days a week.

About Community Payback

The type of work includes:

- graffiti removal
- street clean-ups
- ground clearance and landscaping
- repainting
- improvements to parks and other community facilities.
- work for local charities

Offenders have to wear orange Community Payback jackets to make the work more visible.

You can have a say in what type of work is carried out in your area by nominating a Community Payback project.

We also work in partnership with local councils, voluntary organisations and other providers to identify suitable projects which benefit local communities.

Community Payback aims to:

- improve local communities
- reduce crime and the fear of crime
- be visible to local communities
- allow offenders to make a positive contribution

How does it work?

Members of the public suggest ideas for work projects. We then carry out an assessment to make sure:

- the work can be done safely
- it will benefit the community
- it does not take paid work from others

Offenders work in supervised groups or individually with voluntary organisations and other agencies. We make sure they are fully risk assessed, suitable to work in the community and carefully supervised.

We are keen to promote the Community Payback scheme. We want people to see that the work is being carried out.

About 62,500 offenders successfully complete Community Payback sentences each year.

Offenders work over 8.4 million Community Payback hours a year. This is worth about £49 million (based on the national minimum wage).
